And then “just as suddenly as it came, the hype stopped dead. Covid-19 hit, travel was cancelled, as we all “rightly “concentrated on bigger things. But it never really left the headlines, in all that time. Daily, I still see shining out from newspapers that shot of us both seated in Buckingham Palace in those heady moments before the interview began. That was the literal “snapshot“!! He and I both wondering how we could emerge from that room with our reputations unscathed. Four years on, there has been a musical, many mugs, birthday cards and sweat-jibe T-shirts. There’s a film and a TV drama in production. And this documentary shortly to hit our screens. I have stayed in touched with many of the original team who worked so brilliantly on that interview. Some have stayed at the BBC, but progressed to different jobs. Some have moved outside it. There is a bond amongst that team that I think “I hope “will stay with us forever. We went into that interview knowing it was the highest form of journalistic jeopardy. When the royals meet the BBC “traditionally “someone always gets fired
